Road Bond Sales May Lose County $100,000

TO CALL SPECIAL BOARD MEETING ON ROAD BOND PUZZLE

1921 HIGHWAY PROGRAM HINGES ON ACTION OF SUPERVISORS.

LOT OF RED TAPE

Legislature Says Counties Can Sell Bonds Under Par, Meaning Considerable Loss.

For the purpose of passing legislation in order that the remaining concrete road bonds be sold below par, a special meeting of the Rock county board will be called during February by Chairman E. D. McGowan. It was announced at the court house today that the board will call the special meeting to be held today by Chairman E. D. McGowan, District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie, County Highway Commissioner Charles E. Moore, County Clerk Edward W. Lee, and County Treasurer A. M. Church.

The special meeting is the result of a bill enabling the counties to sell highway bonds below par which was passed by the state legislature recently. Almost every county in the state which floated road bonds has experienced the same difficulty as Rock county in finding a sale for the bonds at low rates of interest.

Can Discount Bonds

The act provides that a county board can, with a two-thirds vote, sell road bonds at less than par just so long as the discount will not be more than six percent. There is considerable red tape mixed up in the act, which is being untangled by the county officials. Rock county must sell some of its remaining road bonds before the work on the Edgerton concrete highway can be continued this spring.

Instead of attempting to increase the interest on the bonds in order to meet the competition of commercial bonds bringing 8 and 9 per cent, the state legislature voted to allow the counties to sell below par. Selling the road bonds below par is likely to cost the county around $100,000 if all the bonds are sold below the face value of $500.

The only reason advanced as to why the legislature voted to discount the bonds rather than increase the interest is to prevent the repurchasing of the bonds, which would take considerable time.

Violate Referendum

Also there is a technical question for the district attorney to determine whether Rock county can discount the bonds. The bonds were passed on a question which exactly stated that the bonds should be sold at par and not cost the county more than the par value.

This young woman found that House Renting was a hard job.

"I have just been talking with a man who says he has been three weeks trying to rent a house in Janesville with some modern improvements with rooms enough for himself and wife and one child for $30 a month. He says it cannot be done."

That was what the editor of the Gazette said to a young woman who is a member of the staff. "Then he went on: 'You start in now and take as much time as you want to rent a house for $30 or $35 a month with modern improvements. Take time but rent it. You want it for a year and your husband is a hard working man with rather high tastes.' That young woman has been two weeks at the job. Here is a part of her experiences in that time in renting such a house. She has not arrived at the rental yet.

"For rent." "Wanted to rent." These are the signs of the times. They are friends on short acquaintance. Rentable houses are in demand. Desirable houses for rent are scarce. The "For rent" signs that stay up are up because the price is up. The want-to-renters are moving because they hope to better their condition. The past winter has been one of depression.

But Where Are They?

"Oh, there will be plenty of houses to rent," has been the common feeling. But despite the alarming cry from the real estate houses were left behind. Renters took the chance to get a house, those dissatisfied with their quarters moved to a better place. Only the less desirable

Above, Abraham Lincoln and monument, recently erected to Ann Rutledge, his one-time sweetheart. Below, maple tree at Augustus, Me., planted in his honor the day he died, and wedge used by Lincoln when splitting rail, now in National Museum.

Worshipped from the day he became the nation's chief executive, the love for Abraham Lincoln continues to grow and now, 50 years after his death, new steps are being taken to further perpetuate his memory. Among the recent interesting projects to the remembrance of Lincoln's greatness are a tombstone erected to the memory of his one-time sweetheart, Ann Rutledge, over her grave in Oakland cemetery, south of Petersburg, Ill., and the contribution to the National Museum collection of a wedge used by Lincoln in his rail-splitting days.

Several movements have been made previous to this time to erect a monument to Ann Rutledge. The funds for the erection of the monument were given by members of the families of descendants of the people who were intimately acquainted with the great emancipator. A verse from Edgar Lee Masters' poem, "Ann Rutledge," is inscribed on the monument.

An historic maple tree at Augustus,

Maine, has been given a place in the Hall of Fame for trees. A list of the trees eligible for a place in the Hall of Fame is being compiled by the American Forestry Association. Mrs. Reuben Partridge planted the tree in memory of Abraham Lincoln on the day he died, April 15, 1865.

now speaks more quietly. Although persons anywhere in her bedroom can hear everything she says. With the exception of two hours' slumber last Monday night, she has not had any sleep with the exception of a few occasional moments of drowsiness during which she continued to talk. She eats heartily.

Specialists advanced the theory that the child's parents that her condition might be a forerunner to sleep-ward sickness, but so far there have been no manifestations of unusual drowsiness.

Schwab Scared Germans Hurley Informs House in Defending Shipping Board

Steel Magnate Described as Foremost Captain of Industry in Country, Praised for War Services, Heartened British, Enthused British.

Washington, Feb. 12.—E. N. Hurley, former chairman of the shipping board, testified today before a house committee that he had been told by Charles M. Schwab at the Paris peace conference that the appointment of Charles M. Schwab as director general of the emergency fleet corporation had frightened the Germans, heartened the French and enthused the British.

Mr. Hurley described difficulties encountered in the rapid evolution of the government merchant fleet during the war. Chairman Walsh questioned him as to services rendered by Mr. Schwab.

HOUSE RENTING HARD

JOB IS DISCOVERED

part ten days. The rents ranged from $15 to $17 a month. The first three who visited were not so bad either one of two would do. But the next day when she called up each had been rented.

New Houses for Rent.
Four new houses, entirely modern,
just constructed, a brand new building, up on "the hill." They have six rooms and bath and rent for $40. A one-half price was compared with the $50 asked for some of the has-been pretentious houses in other parts of the city.

A 10 room house, with gas and water, but no electricity nor furnace was for rent on a mid-city street.
There were many inquiries about the place, but no acceptance. None would pay $50 for the place. The house stood empty for about two months. Then the rent was dropped to $50. Less than a week later a query showed that the house had been rented for $40. This house has several bedrooms and a bath and the scale of prices. Several years ago when it was first rented it rented for $10, then up to $12, then $15 and on up. Then the great demand for homes gave the landlord for courage. One family paying $50 was turned out of the house and it was re-rented at $60.
This rented stayed only a short time, unable to pay the price. The next renter paid for $60, but stayed only a month or two. She deemed the rent too high. No one else came along with the $60. The rent was then reduced to $50. It did not stay there and now it is rented for $40. The landlords are coming to earth, of necessity.

Apartment for Rent.
A 3-room apartment with bath and gas, upstairs, formerly rented for $30.
It is three blocks from the heart of the city. The rooms are large and light, but the woodwork and walls are in terrible condition.
The owners will be glad to fix it up if you will take the place," said the agent. "They are going to go for $20 in order to get some one in there. Other families live in this house but the apartment has its separate entrance and is entirely cut off from others."

Here is Bargain, But—
A 10 room lower flat, with gas and water, in the Jeffers flats on Dodge street stood idle for several months.
The former tenants had moved out out last fall as the building was to be torn down to make way for a new theater. But it was not torn down.
This flat was a bargain in price. It was large, it had a bath, being asked, it only $21 per month. Being asked, and this only $1 a month raise over the last tenants. But there was no assurance as to how long one might stay in the place. It might be month, it might be a year, said the agent. But the flat was rented. The tenants do their own repairing.

Houses at Premium.
"Sorry," have another real estate dealer to the renters' query. "Houses for rent are at a premium. We have only one house for rent and it is not doable and I would not urge it on you." And this firm was supposed to have one of the longest lists of houses of all the agencies in the city.

Further inquiry led the renter to a 2-room house was out by the Samson foundry. But it was not modern, had only gas, and rented for $35.
Owners are greedy. They are trying to rent anything in any condition. A 3-room cottage out off of Racine street, not modern at all, was offered for rent at $15. A flat over a business house on upper Milwaukee street rents for $55. Its present tenants say it "leaks and everything." A few rooms and bath can be secured down on Glenn street. The party that was there paid $25, who real estate agent said was completely himself on price but holding out hope that the price would come down.

Flat for $50.
An unbeautiful flat on a back street,
near town, five rooms and bath, hot air furnace, built, 6 years ago, rents for $50.

It is a respectable looking straight front house with large porches on front and back, but the surroundings are not desirable.
The renter was discouraged. It seemed a hopeless job. Then an answer to an ad in the paper led to a new hope, a home that sounded reasonable and possible. Although the price was above her limit, she visited this modern—except electric lights—house, six rooms and bath, about eight blocks from Milwaukee street out towards Samson. Forty dollars was not asked. Too much, she could not afford to pay it, not now with her husband working only four days a week and her son out of work entirely.

Here's $75 House.
Innocent inquiries led to a few places way above her hopes, but how was she to know the rent without asking? But the cool indifference with which the owner replied "$75"
was enough to send her hustling down off "the hill" again. This $75 place was an upper flat of what probably used to be a house. It had not an abundance of room, only four rooms and bath, heat and water supplied, but it belonged to what she terms the elite class.

Another elite home, which, my goodness no, could not be turned into a common rooming house, used to bring in $75 for its smartness. But it was large, it had 10 rooms. It is termed "high class." But even it is failing. The rent has come down $20 since the days of its last tenants, some time ago.

$25, But Look At It.
Twenty-five dollars is an often met price for just an ordinary, usually run down and undesirably

So Ends This Feud of the Mountains

The Passing of "Devil Anse" Hatfield Brings to a Close the Most Tragic War Between Families of Modern Times—A Bloody Romantic Chapter of Kentucky's History in Which All but One of a Family Line Were Slain.

DEVIL ANSE HATFIELD, the most terrible crimes committed during the whole feud. It was a warm August morning when the whole countryside gathered at the polling place to elect the next year. A man named Thomas Stafford was running for justice of the peace. He had married a sister of "Devil Anse" Hatfield and "Devil Anse" had brought his whole Hatfield crew, Elias, Valentine, Ellison, who was called "Deacon", because he was in a church, over to the Kentucky side of the line to work for Stafford. The McCoy family, who were related to Stafford by marriage, were related to Stafford by marriage, so both sides were working for the same man. By noon the election was over, and it was decided a celebration must be staged.

"Let's get whiskey and drink to the victory," someone suggested. "Who's got whiskey?" "I have," spoke up Joe Davis, a storekeeper. "In my store, half a mile away."

"Both," was the unanimous response. "To this day residents near the Tug River part of the Kentucky-West Virginia line say that Joe Davis should have known enough not to sell two kinds of liquor to the same celebrants at the same time, but he sold them, drinks were mixed, the lid was blown off, and Stafford and Death were equal victors at the end of the day."

The Hatfields and McCays were drinking together at the same time, but he remembered he had lent "a dollar six bits" to "Lias," "Hog Thief Floyd" Hatfield's son, and that the debt was past due. Talbot painfully figured how much moonshine he could buy with a dollar and seventy-five cents (a quantity in that day) and demanded the money of "Lias."

"I don't owe you none," was "Lias's" reply. Talbot reflected on the matter a while. "Well, I guess I'll have to take the worth of it out of your hide," he decided, and started after "Lias." He was getting the best of "Lias" in a fair fight when "Uncle Elias" came to the rescue of his nephew. Fair fighting meant nothing to them. "Uncle Elias" brandished a revolver. "Deacon" Ellison opened a long-barreled pocket knife. McCoy, then jumped into the ring with a revolver, but a constable arrested Talbot. Another arrested young "Lias," and the trouble was over for a minute.

That was just about as long as peace lasted, for the mixed drinks had so worked on "Deacon Ellison" that he forgot his religion and craved a fight. He called Talbot a coward, dared him to fight, waved the knife from side to side as he talked, until the constable, instead of arresting "Deacon Ellison" with the rest, released Talbot, so he could fight for his life.

There was a spot of smooth, dusty turf under the widespread branches of a huge beech tree and the crowd formed a wide ring around this, pushing Talbot and "Deacon Ellison" into the center of it. A faint haze of dust rose around the two men, as they stood slightly crouched, glaring at each other. Then Talbot slowly reached on his pocket knife, drew out a pocket knife the size of the "Deacon's" and opened it.

There was a breathless silence while the crowd shuffled to and fro uneasily, and more than a few drew revolvers out of their pockets, examined their condition carefully, and placed their hands on the triggers. Then the two men in the center of the ring jumped at each other, and the fight was on.

A fight to a finish, both knew it. The "Deacon," striking overhandedly, slashed Talbot across the head, cutting him to the scalp. Talbot, with his eyes blinded with blood, responded with an undercut, driving his knife deep in the "Deacon's" side, hitting a rib, however, and thus inflicting a mortal blow.

The crowd yelled wildly, the two fighters separated, closed together again, and the "Deacon" started another overhand blow, but the very strength of his arm closed the knife in his hand, and he dropped it useless on the ground, at the same time seizing Talbot around the waist and grappling with him. Talbot, thrusting his knife into the "Deacon" with the fury of a demon when they both fell to the ground.

The Kentucky folk still stand what caused the men to fall, stab "Deacon" as he threw Talbot, the Hatfields claim. "One of the Hatfield rang kicked Talbot under the knees and both men went down," the McCays say. "Deacon" as he threw Talbot, the Hatfields claim. "One of the Hatfield rang kicked Talbot under the knees and both men went down," the McCays say.

The courage of Talbot McCoy. He tied the three prisoners to a stout rope, for use in logging operations, and like cattle drove them to the banks of the Tug River. The McCays were going to the execution at the hands of men more merciless than enemies at war. They reached the water's edge and "Farmer" McCoy, faint from fear and exhaustion, Little Randolph went ahead and begged to be released, but Talbot stood erect as a soldier, and looked his murderers square in the eye.

"Centenarian, who shot me I want you to look me in the face," he said. "I don't want you to go behind me."

The men were dragged through the water and its ooze, revived "Farmer" McCoy. Up the bank they were led to three big papaw bushes, on a level stretch of ground at the foot of a high hill. Some sheep killing dogs had been tied there and, recently, and among the bones of these the boys were made to kneel while the Hatfields tied them to the bushes.

Lanterns were hung to throw their light on the victims. Ellison, another Hatfield of "mixed blooded kin," knelt and steadied his rifle on his knee. "Take aim," Valentine Hatfield ordered.

"Fire!" was the command, and a Hatfield volley rang out. Two men fell in the road, one dead, one injured. The injured man was Calvin McCoy, but the dead one was Hense Scott, the most innocent of all "innocent bystanders" murdered in the Hatfield-McCoy feud.

Next a general raid on all the McCays was planned, but the McCays got wind of it and escaped. "How did you get the news?" the Hatfields reflected, and considered every possible place where a "leak" about information might get out. The possibilities narrowed down to one woman connected with the feud, and merely walking along the road with McCoy.

KLEIN ADVOCATES LAW ENFORCEMENT

Candidate for Mayor Here Announces Platform of 13 Planks.

A platform of strict enforcement of the law and various municipal improvements was made public today by Henry C. Klein, ex-fire chief, who announced on Thursday that he would again oppose Thomas E. Welsh, present mayor, in the 1921 race for the highest city office. Mr. Klein will publish the platform in full on Monday.

The platform contains a pledge for an administration without "any bombast or unreasonably" and a guarantee of enforcement of the laws against "flashing" and leading so women may not be subjected to insults. He advocates the appointment of a woman police officer and no outside interference with the enforcement of laws.

Mr. Klein favors keeping streets in condition and sees in the repairing of the streets the best way to get things that they will have to be rebuilt. He comes out flatly for more paving in all parts of the city.

Mr. Klein is going away with the purchasing committee of the council, advocating the purchase of supplies by a committee in charge of each department. He also opposes "secret" negotiation of municipal contracts.

"I shall not oppose an increase of wards to such a reasonable number as the people may wish," is one plank.

While not promising any changes, he declares he will do his best. He elected, to better the service given by the gas and electric companies about which, he says, there are many complaints. He guarantees a respectful hearing for every alderman and every citizen who appears before the council.

Hear Attorney General Morgan at the Court House Monday next, Feb. 14, 7:45.

TO CALL SPECIAL MEETING OF BOARD

state law was followed in accurate detail when the question was put to a vote and sale below par would be in violation of the referendum provisions.

An opinion will be obtained from the attorney general. It has been decided that the legislative unit was intended to remedy a situation in all counties and bring a market for road bonds throughout Wisconsin.

Mr. Klein says that the act will enable Rock County to make its own bonds, declared County High Commissioner Charles E. Moore. "There has got to be a consideration of the time element if a start is obtained on the Edgerton road," he says. The contract for grading should be let as early as feasible.

May Increase Interest
Instead of selling the bonds below par it was suggested today that the bonds have a stipulated interest, stating that interest was raised to 10 per cent, thereby saving the money which would be lost through a discount sale.

It is not the plan of the county, it was explained, to sell all the remaining bonds below par, but an amount sufficient to assure the continuation of the Edgerton road. It is hoped that the financial situation will clarify itself enough in a few years to float the issue as it was intended.

Whether the bonds already sold will be discounted and be paid at 6 per cent is another question the county board will be called upon to thresh out during a special session. The date for which is to be set next week by Chairman McGowan.

MATINEE DANCE PROVES SUCCESS

The first matinee dance held this year under the auspices of the student council of the Janesville high school was a complete success. The gymnasium was jammed with pupils yesterday. No admission was charged. The music was given by the high school orchestra. Principal Bassford states there will be more.

Pay Penalty Today

JOE ANDERSON. FERRY HULL.

Youthful foolishness today paid the penalty.

Joe Anderson, 18 and Perry Hull, 17, were committed to the Green Bay reformatory to start their four and a half year term, imposed upon them yesterday for grand larceny. Securely handcuffed, they were taken to Green Bay by Sheriff Cash, Whipple this morning.

Anderson was to have been released from the county jail on March 1, at that time his 30 day term for grand larceny was completed and he would have been at liberty to return home. He has been promised aid by relatives and friends to return to his home in railroad fare to Arkansas, his home.

Hull was to have been paroled out to work on a road construction gang this week. He was in jail for the theft of bicycle parts and had been given his liberty under the parole law of the state.

Rather than serve their terms, under liberal conditions and clemency, the two lads headed their way out of the county jail last Sunday evening after a sensational plot. In their attempt to escape they stole an automobile of the Rock County Sugar company in charge by W. B. Davis and were captured in Juneau, Wis.

When arraigned on the complaint charging the theft of the automobile, they were sentenced, in within six months of the maximum term in the state reformatory in Green Bay.

Cow Damaged Car, the Claims

The case of La Verne Austin against Dr. Kinast, Beloit, for $150 damages incurred in the death of a cow alleged to have been killed by Kinast's car, was continued in justice court indefinitely for further testimony after the hearing of witnesses occupied all yesterday.

Austin lives six miles from Beloit. Kinast has filed a counter claim against Austin for $200 damages to the seven passenger car which was badly damaged in the collision, claiming that at the time of the accident the car was traveling at a very slow speed and that the cow ran full tilt into the car, causing it to be damaged.

Testimony of Austin showed that the cow's skull was crushed to a pulp, the ribs were broken and broken bones were found in heart and lungs of said cow.

BOY SCOUTS OF BELOIT IN RELAY OF MESSAGE HERE

Offering cooperation to Janesville in pushing the 12th annual meeting here, the scouts of Beloit today closed a week of celebration of "Boy Scout Anniversary Week" with a relay race to this city, carrying a message from Y. T. Jacobs, secretary of the Beloit Chamber of Commerce, to L. O. Holman, manager of the Janesville Chamber. Scout Stephens arrived with the message at 11:05 to be received by Assistant Manager Louis Shon in the absence of Mr. Holman. A reply of thanks was dispatched after Mayor Thomas E. Welsh made a short speech.

At 9 o'clock this morning James Cunningham started with the message for Janesville, carrying it half mile, when another scout took up the chase, the message being relayed every half mile. Twenty-eight scouts participated and were forwarded returned to Beloit in autos.

The letter that was carried pointed out the success of the Boy Scouts, which were organized in Beloit 10 months ago.

In speaking to the boys, Mayor Welsh declared that boy scouts are the future builders of the nation and should get considerable help from the Chambers of Commerce of the country. He dwelt upon the educational advantages to the boy and the community, deriving nothing but good from the organization.

"Learn that your country is the greatest on earth," he said, "free from the prejudices that hamper Europe."

LODGE NEWS.

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER LXIX
NEW ASSOCIATIONS

After all, though there was nothing we could do. We could be as nice as possible to Bud. We could make our flat so attractive he would want to go elsewhere and we could warn him a little when we saw he was getting restless for the sort of company Pete offered.

And that was all.

The question was, would it be enough?

After Bud's confession, Vi went about rather quiet and serious. This was something I had to see to it that I knew was inevitable. Vi was growing up rapidly.

Sometimes I think we grow up by leaps and bounds and little tragedies. Happiness keeps us young, sometimes if we have too much of it it makes us shallow and thoughtless. But on the other hand, too much sorrow may make us bitter—or richly sympathetic.

Such sorrow as Esther had suffered had only made her more resentful. It remained to see what effect similar experiences would have on Vi. I felt sure that they would not make her bitter. I wanted to spare her everything I could.

Meanwhile, as I said, there was nothing we could do, except to show Bud we cared for him.

"And I doubt whether that's a good thing," Helen remarked to me one day when she ran up for a moment to see me.

"Bud is already a spoiled child and Vi only makes him worse. He's too sure of her, that's the whole trouble."

"You've had such a success taking me in hand," I said. "If you want to take hold of Violet, I'm sure you'll make things come out all well for her as for me."

Helen grinned, her delightful, humorous grin. She was sitting in her favorite posture, on a heap of pillows on the floor, and she had the latest news and scandal and by that time I'll have an idea.

"Lead me your morning paper," she said. "I want to read up on the latest news and scandal and by that time I'll have an idea."

I left her comfortably fixed, and went about my housework. The breakfast dishes were soon cleared away, the beds made up, and the little bedroom made charming again.

"Vi had dressed in a hurry to take a college examination early that morning and her possessions strewn the room from end to end."

Then I straightened and dusted the living room, touching each of our possessions with delight. I never lost my joy in going about this cozy little home, set down in the middle of a still, squalid neighborhood.

"You've just the homemaker's touch," Helen said finally, dropping her paper to watch me. "It's something in the way you settle things in their places, as well as in the places you choose for them."

"I should say it was the things chosen," I answered, pleased at the compliment.

"That's part of it too. But you have the correct sense of things. You know the quiet of a neutral tone, the background and the restfulness of bare spaces. You know the sort of bright color that should break into an otherwise monotonous scheme. You instinctively choose the article that's plain and good in line."

"Listen to the girl!" I interrupted. I was still too used to flattery.

"Have you ever noticed suddenly, I flushed a little."

"You've no right to forget," she said, "that if you want a woman your age who wants to keep her youth would have to do a little work for it."

She was right. As you have, who wants to keep her youth, must work five times as hard. Here, I'll make you a program to follow."

She went over to Violet's pile of school books, took some paper and a pencil and pad and, sitting on the floor again, made out my "program."

"You get up, when—1? All right. But a housewife's day is not a night. Get breakfast and do your routine work—without corsets—and get as much exercise out of it as you can. You're through by when—2?"

"Nine when I haven't any special cleaning."

"Special cleaning one day a week, then you needn't follow this schedule," she related. "Because you'll have to be dressed differently if you do hard work."

"All right. Lie down for half an hour. Then at 3:30 do your exercises. At 10 take a hot bath. Lie down at 11. Then you may do your other work—going out, getting ready for dinner, getting lunch, or sewing. After lunch go for a brisk walk—you can combine shopping with it if you want, so long as you get the walk and the fresh air."

"If you're out late in the evening," she went on, "do your hair and scalp massage late in the afternoon. It's not at night. Once a week—Fridays, shall we say—a Turkish bath. Yes," as I protested, "it will make your skin marvelous and it will tone up your whole system. One night—Wednesdays—dancing lessons. I'll go with you."

"Good heaven!" was all I could say. But Helen was obdurate, and I began meekly to follow her routine, as I once followed Esther's.

"I should say," she went on, "settling herself more comfortably among the cushions."

Tomorrow—I Drop Five Years

St. Valentine's Day Is Next Excuse for Gay Parties; Some Suggestions

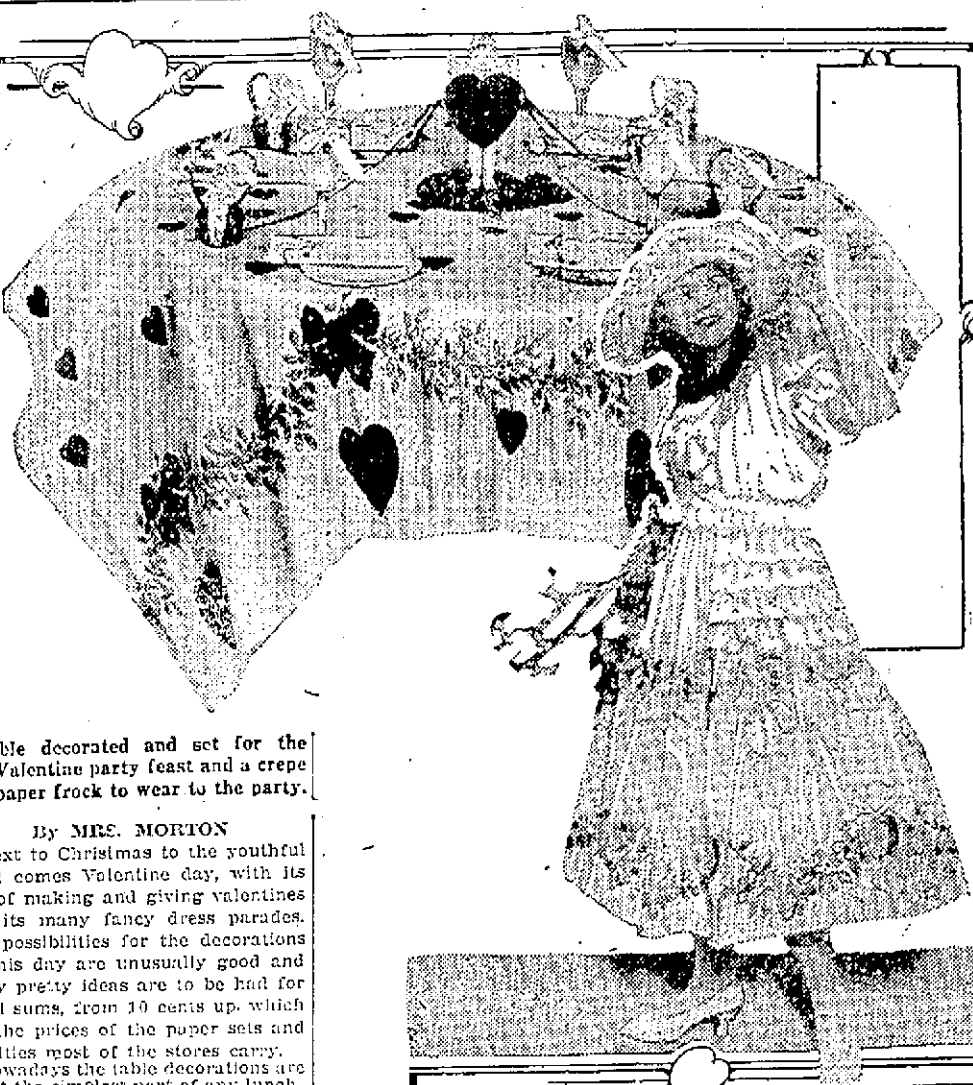

Table decorated and set for the Valentine party feast and a crepe paper frock to wear to the party.

By MRS. MORTON

Next to Christmas to the youthful mind comes Valentine day, with its fun of making and giving valentines and its many fancy dress parades. The possibilities for the decorations on this day are unusually good and many pretty ideas are to be had for small sums, from 10 cents up, which are the prices of the paper sets and novelties most of the stores carry.

Nowadays the table decorations are about the simplest part of any luncheon. The illustration shows a table set with a paper cloth decorated with many hearts and a garland border. Paper plates, paper napkins, paper cups and saucers, and a paper centerpiece holding a large paper heart complete the decoration. A paper centerpiece holding a large paper heart complete the decoration.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl almost 17 and my parents object to my going with boys. I have never been to a dance or a party. I am sure you will help me. I love him the same as I would my own brother if I had one. His mother told me he cares a great deal for me. He does not like to go with other girls and he calls for me after school to take me riding.

He is a young man with excellent qualities, has a good job and is liked by everyone. I gave him a silver pencil for Christmas and he was very much pleased, but he didn't give me anything. I asked him for my picture. He said I ought to give it to him.

He has my ring and one day I asked him for it and he said he would like to keep it.

He has come to see me at my grandmother's home. One thing I do not like is that when I go to see him at his office he does not seem to want me there. Some men tease him about me. Do you think that is the reason why?

He knows my father very well. His parents think I go with him. One day his mother asked me over the telephone to come to see her, although I do not know her personally. Do you think I ought to go? Only my grandparents know of our acquaintance and they like him very much.

Your parents are right when they consider you too young to go with boys. I do not think you are doing the right thing to keep your friendship with the young man a secret. Be open and above board and tell your parents what your grandparents already know. Probably you can get your grandparents to intercede for you.

To make a practice of going out evenings with boys would be a bad thing for a girl of your age. I think it would be harmless if the young man called at your home occasionally after school or early in the evening.

I never advise girls to give their pictures to boys. A picture is so personal that it should only be given to a true friend or a fiance.

It is very bad form to call on a young man at his place of business. His employer is not paying him to talk to a girl. Probably your father is annoyed because he knows it is not the right thing, but he is popular, entertaining and very easy to get acquainted with. And I am afraid that he would meet someone he would learn to think more of and, too, something might happen to him. He refuses to go unless I will marry him first. Please advise me.—A. J. W.

I think you are a very sensible little lady for 17 years old. A. J. W. thought I was a little bit too young to be so wise. You are a white to become engaged. Your "bargain" was right—you should finish school, both for the sake of the education and because you are too young to marry. But I don't think the young man should go back into the Navy on those terms.

If he wants you to marry him as soon as you are old enough, he should stay at home and settle down right now to work for you. There are plenty of places right here where he can learn a trade or establish himself in business, save money for your home, and make a place for himself to grow in. You should both be free while he is gone—only thus can sorrow and heartaches be avoided. Then, when he returns, if you are both still free, let him ask for an engagement again.

If he doesn't agree with us, ask him to write me his side of it—and be sure to send his name and address so I can write him a personal letter.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Page in care of the "What Shall I Do?" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. While requiring considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a person or persons really is despondent and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the questions.—The Editor.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

Her Husband's Place Is Home

"Dear Miss Page: I am 17 years old and a junior in High School. Three months ago I became engaged to a young man of 24. Our 'bargain' was that I could finish school before we were married. Now he is crazy to enter the Navy where he was during the war, but he wants me to marry him first. He argues that by doing this he can learn a trade (and he has no real trade now). I can finish my school, take a business course, and be well provided for, too. Then at the end of three years, when he would return, we would both be the wiser and more fitted to take up the responsibilities of man and wife."

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR JOE:

Shame you didn't like the clams, as judging by the general downward tone of your letter you didn't. Perhaps I shouldn't have told you they only cost three cents apiece and then you might of smoked them in ignorant bliss 'tis folly to be wise. I might send you some more of the same kind without mentioning what I paid for them, but considering the way you depreciated my last efforts, I don't think I will.

But speaking of Thrift Joe I tried out a new scheme day before yesterday, namely, doing without ice. I saved about 50 cents in ice bills for the three days. In other words, I had lost 50 cents' worth of butter in the transaction owing to it taking on that peculiar disappointed taste that butter adopts when it don't taste like it ought to. I suppose things such as butter that are educated to having ice around all the time can hardly be expected to bear up under a sudden experiment like that with practically no warning.

Hinted the new Finnish maid that cannot speak a word of English has asked for a raise already. She got her sister to write it out for her and she says the baby cries so much that she thinks she ought to have a raise. Can you imagine that Joe? The baby cries in English so Hilda can't understand him anyway, but when I explained that to her through her sister it didn't make any more impression on her than water in a duck's ear and out the other. All she wanted was an excuse. So instead of giving her the raise I just let her have fifty cents more a week to let the whole matter drop.

The baby has a little doll that he seems to like the best of all his toys except that he spends most of his time punching it in the face. My goodness, Joe I hope it's not a symbol that he's going to be a woman hater.

Well, olive oil not good bye.

TESSIE.

Marquette—John Hiler, 55, succumbed to apoplexy. He died at a farmhouse at his home and sat down to rest after returning from the basement. Members of the family thought he was asleep until attracted by his paleness, found him dead. He was engaged in business here many years.

Of course, all the dishes served at the luncheon or supper party should have some sort of heart decoration or be in some way a reminder of the occasion.

The dress which is illustrated may be readily made over from an old muslin slip or frock. It is all fashioned of paper with hearts and garlands for decorations. The hat is also made of paper.

How the Dress Is Made

Paste the decorated crepe paper which forms the lower part of the skirt to the fold of plain pink crepe paper which forms the upper part. Paste while the paper is spread flat. The gathered skirt at the waistline will situate.

Four narrow ruffles of pink paper trim the hips and the sleeves. The ruffles are best made on the sewing machine.

The waist is made of plain pink crepe paper slightly full and cut with rounding neck.

A shirred band of crepe paper, two inches wide, also made on the machine, trims the waist, extending around the belt line crossing in front and ending at the shoulders. A heart and ribbon motif pasted on where the bands cross the waist in front repeats the skirt motif.

The foundation of the hat is simply a wire ring shaped as illustrated. A double piece of pink crepe paper is drawn around this wire to form the brim and is then pasted together at the back. A gathered crown of the decorated design is sewed in place and the hat is finished with narrow ruffle around the edge and streamers.

Refreshment Suggestions

Here are descriptions of a number of attractive dishes from which you may select the menu best adapted to your needs.

Tomato soup or bouillon with heart-shaped croutons. Creamed oysters or chicken in heart-shaped pattie cases. Large red apples hollowed out and filled with a mixture of apples, nuts, celery and salad dressing.

Cupid's Salad: Cut out heart-shaped pieces of tomato jelly that was hardened in a large, flat dish and place on crisp lettuce leaves. Prepare a cupful of stoned olives, sliced and chopped cucumber pickles, mix with mayonnaise and place a little heap upon each red heart.

St. Valentine's Nectar: Melt six rounding teaspoons of grated chocolate, then add quickly six cups of boiling milk. When chocolate is thoroughly dissolved add two tablespoons of strong, clear coffee and a teaspoon of vanilla. Serve hot with whipped cream and sugar.

APPLE PUDDINGS

Apple Roll—Make a biscuit dough, place on top four or five sour apples, chopped finely. Roll and place in a buttered pan or a casserole. Make a syrup by boiling together for five minutes one cup of sugar, one-half cup water, one-half teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg. Pour half over roll, saving remainder to serve as sauce. Bake one-half hour in an uncovered pan, basting with syrup.

DISCOVERIES

To Stretch Curtains—Fold the lace curtain double, lengthwise; then pin it on tightly stretched clothes line with pins close together. Slip a clean pole inside the cover-curtain. When the curtain is taken off the line it will look much neater than when put on the stretcher.

Darning Hose—It is much easier to use a small embroidery hoop instead of a stocking darning.

Cleaning Enamelware—Sanded hand soap is excellent for cleaning enamelware. It is not nearly so harmful to the hands as scouring powder and is inexpensive.

Consider the New McCall Pattern for Your Spring Sewing

WE recommend this new kind of pattern because we feel that it marks a step forward in the progress of Home Sewing. It is the new, the modern, the improved Pattern that all home dressmakers should hear about.

And those women, too, who have looked forward to sewing hesitatingly, for it offers a sewing guide unusual in its supreme simplicity and accuracy. It will enable more women to learn how to sew.

Before, it has always been necessary to learn the translation of the perplexing perforations of the old Pattern. It has taken unnecessary time to figure out how parts are to be cut and parts to be put together.

It is surely true that while our great branch of citizenry, our splendid farmers, our merchants, our manufacturers, and our great armies of industries workers, our clerks and our teachers, everyone, apparently free and independent, are nevertheless greatly dependent. Dependent on the Manufacturers, Transportation Companies, and others. For as a matter of fact, the food we eat and the clothing we wear all come from the same Manufacturers. The tools used in all work, the farm implements used on farms—it is hard to name a commodity that does not in some way demand labor from some worker. So in place of being independent and free we are very dependent upon each other, and are only a small part of our great economic machinery.

On the other hand, Laborers in Mills, Factories, Mines and our great railroad Systems are told again and again that they hold the Country in their control. Yet, they would starve if the farmer did not use his tools—then further, who would suffer if the manufacturing concerns throughout the United States should cease functioning—or if Transportation Companies go out of business.

Legion Beats Monticello-Blue Seconds Trim Delavan

Official American League Schedule, 1921

LOCAL EX-SERVICE MEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE AT 34-33

Janesville American Legion had a close call at Monticello Friday night when they defeated the town team of that place, 34 to 33. George Caldwell, formerly of this city, and at one time manager of the Lakota Cardinals, refereed.

The ex-service men were shot a score in the opening few minutes when the Monticello lads took the lead from the start with four points. A barrage shot across by the former soldiers put them in the lead. At half time they were ahead, 18 to 14. The playing kept the crowd on the edge. While the legion team kept in the advance, they were closely pressed with the Monticello team coming up fast near the finish. A game followed. The Janesville players were Kober and Cassidy, forwards; Foin, center, and Mifflin and Ryan, guards.

ing and cursing, and had the house surrounded as the Indians did in the pioneer days.

"Use the milk, if the water's gone," "Randall" directed, and Alphonse, his 18-year-old daughter, was bravely trying to do it when Jim Vance, one of the Hatfields, strode up to the door, "Get a light in here," he demanded.

Alphonse tried to build a fire in the fireplace, but all her coals were wet, and she had no matches.

"Can't you get a light?" she said pitifully to the Hatfields, and explained why she couldn't.

"I'll shoot you if you don't," "Cap" Hatfield threatened.

"Cap" Hatfield, I know you," she implied. "You won't kill a woman, will you? Remember, I have two little orphans to take care of. Can't I have prayed for you. I have prayed for peace. Please don't murder me."

Vance broke into her plea. "What the hell are you parleying with her for?" he demanded. "Damn her, make no more account of her than you would of a man. Shoot her, damn her!"

"Cap" raised his rifle to do so, but Ellison Mounts beat him to it. The girl died.

Greatly Becomes Melodramatic.
Old Mrs. McCoy ran out of her house to go to the girls, because she heard them scream that Alphonse was shot. Vance knocked her down with the butt of a shotgun, breaking two ribs, but her mother love still triumphed, and, injured pitifully, she still crawled on hands and knees towards her dead daughter.

"Vance" Hatfield then showed her could slug women as well as the rest of his family. He brought down a heavy volley butt on Mrs. McCoy's head and knocked her senseless.

"Cap" Hatfield had succeeded in firing the house by this time, and Calvin McCoy and his father knew they were trapped.

"I'll make a dash for the corn crib," Calvin said. "If I reach it alive, I'll be able to protect the rear of the house and you can escape."

The two shook hands, and Calvin ran out into the open. He was fairly riddled with bullets before he had

Samson Bowlers Planning Ahead

Forty Samson employees interested in athletics and social welfare banqueted at the Samson school Friday night.

It was the first of a series that will be given through the welfare department of the big plant.

Those in attendance last night were particularly members of the Samson bowling league, which started the 1920-21 season with 15 teams but had to drop out because of adverse conditions. Hopes for a good bowling season of 1921-22 were expressed with promise of aid given.

Promises Support.
Informal talks were made on bowling, baseball and athletics in general by J. M. Glancy, L. A. Markham, Stanley Zapinski, H. M. Lampert, Doctor Johnson, G. O. Reed, C. F. Swanson and J. M. Hendrix.

Assurances that the welfare department of the plant is in favor of all social and athletic activities were made by Mr. Glancy, assistant manager of the Samson. Other social and athletic events will be held at the school in the future.

gone thirty yards, and the Hatfields closed in on him, yelling in triumph. "Randall" sent a volley of bullets, and a couple of other Hatfields were hit.

The game retired, cursing, to concealment, giving "Randall" an opportunity to flee out of the back door. He spent the night in a hog mire, his feet frozen and half senseless. Into a neighbor's cabin the next morning, Alphonse and Calvin McCoy were taken.

Mrs. McCoy, wounded, it seemed, and fatally, was unconscious. The Hatfields had raced, yipping and yelling in shrill triumph, back to the protection of their native West Virginia.

tion of their native West Virginia was aroused by this time and a week after the murder of the two McCoy's, Frank Phillips, a McCoy relative and a deputy sheriff, organized a band of twenty men and went out in search of the Hatfields. Phillips was known as a dead shot and a man of iron nerve.

and the Kentucky hunter in his boundary line meant nothing to him. He went over into the Hatfields' own West Virginia after them, and his pursuit brought results.

Jim Vance, who had so ruthlessly ordered Alphonse McCoy's death was hanged down first. The Hatfield gangster was hiding behind a stump and Phillips fired through the stump and all dropping Vance in his tracks. Bill McCoy, and then Phillips and the "law" ran down Valentine Hatfield and other Hatfield sympathizers.

Valentine Hatfield was hanged for his part in the ambush and murder of the McCoy's, and so was Ellison Mounts. This practically ended the McCoy's part in the feud, but the Hatfields kept on warring, deciding to include in their enmity not only the McCoy's but everyone who had helped the McCoy's hunt down the Hatfields.

"Cap" Hatfield and his 13-year-old stepson rode into Kewanee, W. Va. one election day and murdered three men, the gun turning in his saddle and shooting one down from a great distance in most approved movie fashion.

They also dabbled a little in the game of self-extinction, and Wayne Hatfield murdered Will, his cousin, though it is said that when Wayne placed his pistol against his

MILWAUKEE BOWLERS AT ST. PAUL TONIGHT

St. Paul, Feb. 12.—Nine crack bowling five from Chicago are among those booked to roll late tonight at the tournament of the L. B. A. here.

In addition to the Chicago men, five from Omaha, Milwaukee, Sioux City and the Twin Cities will participate tonight.

There have been no changes in the positions in the various events for several days but bowling fans were looking forward to numerous changes when the heat of invaders from out-side cities took the cities.

Stevens' breast; he closed his eyes and averted his head when he fired—presumably a mark of deference to the fact it was a family affair.

The Philosophy of an Arch Murderer.
What did the Hatfields and McCoy's get out of all their killing? Nothing. "Nope," said "Cap" Hatfield, son of "Devil Anse," and as accomplished a killer as the Hatfields boasted. "Cap's" home long after the last killing of the feud was a 1-room cabin without windows, light or air, and dogs and chickens fairly ate up visitors.

"Do your children go to school?" Mrs. Hatfield was asked.

"Gawd no," she answered. "They ain't no education worth countin' up here."

"You must have had a hard time," "There's ben' trouble aplenty," her voice would say. "There's allus ben' trouble with him. Men folks is hard to get on with."

"Weren't you afraid, all alone so much?"

"I ain't no," with her head high. "Ain't nothin' to be afraidin'. 'Et folks dies they dies and that's all there is on it. I lost plenty of folks, too, with all this trouble of ourn and 'et they goes, why they goes? You can't help it now."

"Cap" sat outside the door on a bench.

"You don't kill McCoy's any more," he was asked.

"Why not?"

"He took his corncob pipe out of his mouth.

"Have you killed them all off?"

"Yep."

"Devil Anse's" abandoned home still stands on the Tug River's east bank, opposite the site of Peter Creek. A visitor there will see a gaudy lithograph hanging in a frame above the fireplace. It reads:

THESE IS NO PLACE LIKE OUR HOME.

"WHAT WILL THE BUILDING MATERIAL MEN DO TO ASSURE THE PUBLIC THAT NOW IS THE TIME TO BUILD?"

This advertisement published by a special Committee Which Was Appointed at a Meeting of Allied Building and Home Furnishings Interests of Janesville, is a forerunner of a series of Notices Planned to Instruct the Public of the Exact Building Situation as it is Today.

LABOR PUTS ITS SHOULDERS TO THE WHEEL

The time has come when Industry should be stimulated and the workers in the various trades in Janesville believe that the greatest opportunity for starting industrial activity is in construction work and particularly in house building.

Janesville needs houses and we believe that now is a good time to build them. There is a consensus of opinion that the cost of labor, which is a big item in building, has fallen as low as it will fall this season, and if this condition prevails on other items that enter into the cost of constructing a home, then it would seem that now is the time for anyone to start who is contemplating a home in which to live and thus help start a forward movement.

There is considerable unemployment of labor in Janesville and this can be quickly overcome if the amount of construction work that is necessary in this city is started at once.

A drop in labor wage rates is being accepted in Janesville, although in the larger cities, labor is fighting against a reduction in wage, thereby retarding progress and keeping men out of employment. Janesville wage rates will always be governed more or less by those existent in other surrounding cities, but right now they are lower.

To get needed construction work started in Janesville, every worker in the building trades has pledged himself to 100% efficiency, a square deal for capital, employers and consumers.

We have thus presented our side of the necessity for a building program at this time and the fact is that as far as labor is concerned it is cheaper to build now and probably is as cheap as it will be for some time.

In answer to the advertisement reproduced on this page, the Committee has received the assurance of all building material and home furnishings concerns that prices are NOW DOWN in all their respective lines with a few exceptions and it is expected that these will be adjusted shortly. Each concern has been asked to analyze a comparison of prices which will be consolidated and produced on these pages as rapidly as possible.

Did you give up building last year because estimates were too high? Go back to the same people and get prices on the same estimates. The savings will amaze you.

Itemized figures are going to be produced for the information of the public. As an introductory statement, this Committee wishes to say that—

The Country as a whole needs new homes more than any other thing.

It is generally estimated that building activities as soon as they get under way will be pushed for several years.

The last two years have shown the entire country to be short of skilled mechanics. They can not be trained fast enough to keep pace with needs that are certain for years to come.

Janesville is fortunate indeed in having a comparatively small number of skilled mechanics, capably trained by years of experience who are loyal to their home town and in many cases own their own homes and pay taxes.

When we again start our program of extensive home building these high-class mechanics may not be sufficient for the work in hand and it may again be necessary to call in outside help who are perhaps not so efficient. Building now you get the benefit of this skilled experience.

Now is the time to start building. Put these mechanics to work. Let the material men make an extra turnover and you will build a cheaper and better house than if you wait.
